Women Artists: Your Time is Now

Women in Art Fair returns for its third edition, this time at gallery@oxo in the iconic OXO Tower Wharf, with a renewed commitment to redressing the gender imbalance in the art world. In a spirit of protest, WIAF 2025 is driven by the urgent need to confront persistent disparities in visibility, opportunity, and value for women and female-identifying artists.

The figures speak for themselves: between 2008 and 2022, only 3.3% of global auction sales were for works by women. This does not reflect a lack of talent, but rather a systemic failure of recognition—one that Women in Art Fair was established to challenge. The annual event provides tangible support, professional opportunities, and public visibility for women artists at any stage of their careers.

Transitioning to a summer schedule underscores WIAF's distinct position within the art calendar, operating on its own terms—creating a transformative moment where creativity takes centre stage, and where representation and value are celebrated and championed without compromise.

At the heart of this year's fair is the Open Call exhibition, which has attracted nearly 2,000 artists, exhibiting 100 carefully curated works for presentation. Central to this is the committed community of artists, the backbone of WIAF's mission. The selected works reflect the diversity and relevance of contemporary practice by women artists today.

WIAF 2025 also heralds the launch of the Women in Art Fair Prize, designed to celebrate creative excellence and provide financial support and media coverage to artists continuing to develop their careers. Three prize winners have been chosen from the Open Call by a jury of cultural leaders and creative pioneers: Alison Mosshart, musician and visual artist; Vanessa Raw, fine art painter; and Virginia Damtsa, curator and cultural strategist. The prizes of £1,500 sponsored by Fladgate LLP, £750, and £400.

WIAF is an invitation to all those working towards a more equitable art world. Women's rights, whether in the workplace or regarding their bodies, are increasingly challenged. At WIAF, that challenge is met with energy, mutual support, and visibility, offering a space where women's art and creativity can be seen and can stand for all women.

Women in Art Fair is not waiting for its time but claiming it.

Collecting Her: A Conversation with Christian Levett

Thursday 19th June, 11:00-12:00

Speakers: Christian Levett (Founder of FMM) and Carrie Scott (Curator, Art Historian, and Presenter)

How much is a masterpiece? According to collector and founder of FMM (Femmes Artistes du Musée de Mougins), Christian Levett, the art market's historic neglect of women artists meant that, "female art was a bargain." Joined by curator and art historian Carrie Scott to explore his journey collecting antiquities to founding Europe's first museum dedicated exclusively to women artists. At a time when cultural consciousness is putting pressure on institutions to reckon with their pasts and evolve their futures, this timely conversation asks what it takes to truly reshape the art world, and who gets to do it.

Working Without the Pressure of Success: Why Female Artists Still 'Lag' Behind in the Secondary Market

Friday 20th June, 16:00-17:30

Speakers: Sheena Carrington (Market Editor at My Art Broker), Jess Bromovsky (My Art Broker Sales Director & American Pop Specialist) and Carolin von Massenbach (Head of Prints & Multiples at Bonhams London)

While discussions often spotlight the challenges women face entering the art world, less attention is given to the hurdles they encounter in the secondary market. Drawing on insights from our Female Printmakers Report, this panel delves into the persistent gender disparities that affect the resale and valuation of works by leading female artists such as Bridget Riley, Helen Frankenthaler, Yayoi Kusama, Louise Bourgeois, and Tracey Emin. Hosted by Market Editor Sheena Carrington, the conversation features insights from Sales Director at My Art Broker, Jess Bromovsky and Head of Prints and Multiples at Bonhams, Carolin von Massenbach. Together, they will explore how systemic biases have influenced the trajectories of women artists in the secondary market and discuss pathways toward greater equity.

Matrons

Saturday 21st June, 16:00-18:00

Speakers: Virginia Damsta (Curator & Cultural Strategist), Hall Rockefeller (Arts writer & Founder of Less Than Half) and Rachel Verghis (Collector & Founder of MarGin Gin)

Matrons brings together art world powerhouses, Hall Rockefeller, Rachel Verghis, and Virginia Damsta to explore what patronage looks like when led by women, and for women. In a market where rising prices can make art feel out of reach, they will discuss how collecting, at any scale, remains a powerful way to engage with culture, build a collection, and drive change. From funding exhibitions to building collections with purpose, this conversation will dive into the motivations, strategies, and challenges behind being a modern matron of the arts, answering questions about what sustainable, feminist patronage looks like today and how investing in art is becoming a meaningful avenue for women to build cultural and financial legacy.
